The Support Center for Child Advocates provides high-quality, free legal representation, social work and support services to more than 800 abused and neglected children in Philadelphia County. Child Advocates is one of the most successful pro bono models serving children in the country. More than 350 active volunteer attorneys from the Philadelphia Bar supplement the work of a small professional staff of attorneys and social workers. The agency specializes in advocacy for children in civil dependency and criminal child abuse cases. All volunteers attend a full day training program including presentations and skill sessions on juvenile law, services planning, interview techniques and the family dynamics of child abuse. Child Advocates also works to increase public and legislative interest and awareness of child abuse and the need for solutions to this pervasive problem.
